Dear Sir,

Recently I sent a letter in regards to the landfill project near my home. I did look up the link that you sent regarding the ecological impact and it seemed rather vague. It stated that there were 2 rare plants in the area and also the area is mapped for greater sage-grouse, a state threatened species. But there was no mention of how this would impact their project. Also one of the ecological studies was from 2012. Have they done a more recent study?

My main question to you was about the tarps that are being dumped there. Are they considered "construction waste"? As I stated in my original letter, these are a disaster for the environment.

I'm assuming there will be a public hearing for people to ask questions. What is the procedure if people are in opposition?

I look forward to hearing from you. This is weighing heavily on my mind.

Thank you, Sandi Ryan
