17.20.010 Purpose and intent.

The purpose and intent of the Rural Transition zone is to implement the Rural Transition Land Use Designation. It establishes a transitional area between urban growth areas surrounding cities and towns and lower density zoning districts. It serves to establish a future urban residential growth area; protect land that is desired for future urban expansion; encourage the development of areas targeted for urban growth; and help ensure that land currently at the urban fringe will develop eventually at urban densities. It is also the intent of this zone to allow some low-density development now without precluding future development with urban services at urban densities.

17.20.015 Definitions.

Future urban residential growth area: A parcel or a collection of parcels within the path of future urban residential development associated with a city's urban growth area, and which is planned for urban densities by the city and/or county according to a comprehensive plan.

Shadow plat: A conceptual development plan that guides the future development of land at full urban densities for which non-urban density development is sought in the short term. Shadow plats shall show the major transportation routes and utility corridors necessary to attain future urban residential development at urban densities while allowing the placement of buildings and access in the interim.

Non-urban densities: Residential development from 1 dwelling unit per 3<sup>1</sup> acres or 1 dwelling unit per 5 acres as allowed in the Rural Transition Zone.

Urban densities: Residential development with a minimum of at least four (4) dwelling units per acre.
