We were surprised to read in the newspaper of a proposed Pot (Farm) Development on Rader Road. We often use this road for biking and walking. Rader Road is a narrow country road without even a painted line going up the middle. I understand by the newspaper article the full developed plan is for 94 buildings. This is a huge operation to be on a narrow country road with livestock and agriculture traffic. The employees of the operation will most likely be users of the product. This adds to the danger on the narrow country road and the danger would spread to the other roads in the area. The property currently has a Realtor For Sale posted on it. So who really owns it? I think you need to reconsider the need for an Environmental Impact Statement for the Development.
