Rachael,

This is in part why we just wanted to do a Class IV General, the home site(s) have not been identified and to go through this process and answer a wide range of questions about an undetermined project gets to be a bit challenging. You and I talked about this on the phone and you said if we didn't ever build a home there it would not make any difference, this SEPA would cover the requirements if needed in the future. It seems WDFW concerns would be addressed during the building permit process in the event there is a home ever built there.

I would like to move forward with this process if we can without just guessing where something may or may not be in the future. This property has 90 acres of timber land and approximately 130 acres of agriculture land. Building sites, clearing permits, and building permits are very site specific and at that time we can address any concerns, comments, and issues presented by the appropriate regulatory agencies.

Please let me know your thoughts and what is needed to move on.

Thank you.

Good morning!

WDFW sent more comments this morning asking that the potential home sites be shown on a site plan. I will be re-noticing the SEPA next Tuesday 7/12/22. Would it be possible to get that to me by then?

Thank you!
